The first meeting of the Conference of States Parties (CSP) for the Arms Trade Treaty (ATT) will happen within the first year after the ATT enters into force, which is set to take place on 24 December 2014. The first CSP will need to adopt a financing mechanism to govern the financial contributions made by States Parties to the ATT. In preparation for the first CSP, ATT Legal, a project of Control Arms, reviewed the financing mechanisms of 21 different international treaties, primarily in the areas of disarmament and arms control, human rights and humanitarian law, environmental protection, and crime and corruption.

In selecting the treaties for this survey, we took into account the subject matter of the treaty and the existence of an active Conference of States Parties governing that treaty. With regard to subject matter, we included treaties that touch on issues or mechanisms likely covered by the ATT, such as arms control and international human rights and humanitarian law. We also included treaties that have a trade regulation or crime prevention element to address the ATT’s concern with the illicit trade of conventional arms. We sought to include the “core” treaties in each of these areas, and from there, we selected those that are governed by a Conference of States Parties (or in some cases, a Review Conference) with procedural rules that cover similar areas contemplated by the proposed CSP for the ATT.

This survey is designed specifically as a reference and research tool for governments and civil society organizations to assist in developing the financing mechanism for the ATT. While this survey is in no way exhaustive, its aim is to provide a basis for discussion and further research.

FINANCING MECHANISMS

Article 17 of the ATT stipulates that the CSP “shall adopt financial rules for itself as well as governing the funding of any subsidiary bodies it may establish as well as financial provisions governing the functioning of the Secretariat.” In determining their own financial rules and financing mechanisms, the various treaties surveyed have taken a range of approaches, including assessed contributions, voluntary contributions and hybrid models combining both approaches.

Please note that while efforts have been made to reflect all the key mechanisms by which States Parties finance the main bodies under each treaty, it is possible that less formal, likely voluntary, sources of funding may not have been captured.

Of the 20 international treaties reviewed, 19 fund the CSP (or equivalent) and Secretariat (where applicable) at least partly through assessed contributions from States Parties. The calculation of these contributions is usually based on the scale of assessments for the UN regular budget, with varying degrees of modification to reflect, for example, differences in membership between the treaty in question and the UN Charter. In most of these cases, the financing mechanism makes provision for additional voluntary contributions from States Parties to supplement the assessed contributions.

One treaty, the WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control (FCTC), uses a financing mechanism based on voluntary assessed contributions. Voluntary contributions are made by States Parties following an indicative scale of assessments. However, this approach is currently under review and the option of replacing voluntary assessed contributions with assessed contributions is being considered.

There is more variation in the funding mechanisms for the surveyed treaties’ Implementation Support Units (ISUs) (or equivalents, and where applicable). The ISUs usually provide administrative support to the treaty bodies as well as technical assistance to States Parties. One treaty, the CCM, is currently relying on an interim ISU because States Parties have so far been unable to agree on a financing mechanism.

[1] The Arms Trade Treaty Legal Response Network (ATT Legal), a project of Control Arms, provides free legal assistance to UN delegations, government officials and civil society organizations in order to facilitate the effective implementation of the ATT.
Disarmament and Arms Control

The Disarmament and Arms Control section sets out the financing mechanisms for 5 of the major treaties in this field. All 5 CSPs are funded through assessed contributions, supplemented by voluntary contributions. Voluntary contributions are typically made in the context of a sponsorship programme that seeks to ensure full representation of States Parties at CSPs, but can also include technical assistance to States Parties or administrative assistance to meetings.

The treaties differ in their funding of the ISUs. One approach taken by the BWC is to include the costs of the ISU in the meeting costs of the various treaty bodies (in this case, the Review Conference, Meeting of States Parties, and Meeting of Experts), which are funded through assessed contributions, while also encouraging voluntary contributions to enhance the ISU's ability to carry out its mandated tasks. Notably, ISU financing under the Mine Ban Treaty is currently under review and it is proposed that the ISU move to "a new hybrid financing scheme of assessed, voluntary and in-kind contributions".

Human Rights and Humanitarian Law

Work carried out under the 7 human rights and humanitarian law treaties surveyed is supported by the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), which also assists them in harmonizing their working methods and reporting requirements through their Secretariats. States Parties to the treaties make assessed contributions indirectly through the UN regular budget, via the OHCHR, the United Nations Office at Geneva (UNOG), and the United Nations Information Service (UNIS). The OHCHR handles staff costs, travel, and daily subsistence allowance for the meetings; UNOG deals with costs related to conference services; and UNIS prepares and disseminates background and round-up press releases, among other things. Any shortfalls in funding from the UN regular budget are filled with funds from voluntary contributions to the OHCHR. Over one-third of OHCHR's global funding needs are covered by the UN regular budget, with the remainder coming from voluntary contributions from Member States and other donors.

Environmental Protection

States Parties make assessed contributions based on the UN scale of assessments and supplemented by voluntary contributions.

Crime and Corruption

Similar to the international human rights bodies, States Parties to the treaties make assessed contributions indirectly through the UN regular budget, in this case via the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC). States Parties are further encouraged to make voluntary contributions to an account within the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Fund to provide technical assistance to developing countries with implementing the relevant treaty.

The Implementation Review Group (IRG) under one treaty is also funded by assessed contributions through the UN budget; however, specific activities of the IRG are funded by voluntary contributions, such as country visits, joint meetings at the UN Office at Vienna and the training of experts.

Other Treaties

This section includes the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS) and the FCTC. UNCLOS is funded through a hybrid model combining both assessed and voluntary contributions, in line with the majority of the treaties reviewed. FCTC is funded through voluntary assessed contributions, but this funding mechanism is currently under review.
